Chiropractic Oath

I do hereby affirm before God and these assembled witnesses that I will keep this oath and stipulation:

To hold in esteem and respect those who taught me this Chiropractic healing art; to follow the methods of treatment which according to my ability and judgment I consider for the benefit of my patients; to abstain from whatever is deleterious and mischievous; to stand ready at all times to serve my fellow man without distinction of race, color or creed.

With purity I will pass my life and practice my art; I will at all times consider the patients under my care as of supreme importance; I will not spare myself in rendering them the help which I have been taught to give by my Alma Mater; I will keep inviolate all things revealed to me as a physician.

While I continue to keep this oath unviolated, may it be granted to me to enjoy life and the practice of the Chiropractic healing art, respected by all men at all times.

A brief history of academic regalia

The college or university commencement procession is a pageant, bright with dress and ceremony, inherited from the medieval universities of the 11th and 12th centuries. The principal features of the academic costume are the gown, the cap, and the hood.

The flowing gown comes from the 12th century. Many believe it was worn by academicians as a protection against the cold of the buildings. Over the years it has become a symbol of the democracy of scholarship because it covers all indications of social rank or status. For the bachelor and master degrees, the gown has no trimming. For the doctoral degree, traditionally the gown is faced with velvet with three bars of velvet on the sleeves. The bars sometimes are colored representing the academic discipline of study. Some of the more common colors and their disciplines are: blue, philosophy; purple, law; green, health care; yellow, science; light blue, education; red, theology.

When Roman Law freed the slave, the freeman obtained the right to wear a cap. Eventually, the cap also came to be a sign of the freedom of scholarship. Some believe the square shape signifies a book. Others believe the shape originated with the craft guilds, the square symbolic of the masons' guild.

Heraldically, the hood is an inverted shield with one or more chevrons of a secondary color on the ground of the primary color of the degree granting institution. Hoods are trimmed along the edge with a colored velvet representing the discipline of the degree. Centuries ago, the hood was used for protection against the elements and identified academicians of the specific discipline as a group.

Oxford and Cambridge universities have long regulated the regalia in Europe. Their established standards were the prelude to an 1895 consensus of American institutions to create guidelines for this country's academic community. A revised code was adopted by the American Council of Education in 1932 and remains the norm for academia today.
